

Azimut 42 Flybridge

1999–2005

The Azimut 42 is Italian styling at its best in a midsize motoryacht. Built on a deep-V hull with prop pockets to level the engines, the versatile layout of the Azimut 42 makes her perfect for entertaining and cruising. The cockpit is large enough for outdoor meals, and the 42's large flybridge rivals anything in her class for comfort and amenities. Entering from the covered cockpit, the interior—a blend of high-gloss cherry cabinets, cream-colored leather upholstery, and deep pile carpeting—is unusually bright and open thanks to the 42's vast amount of window space. A big C-shaped settee and adjustable dining table are to starboard, across from a smaller settee and entertainment cabinet to port. Forward and two steps up is the lower helm. The galley is to port, down a few steps where it's out of view. The large master stateroom features an island queen berth and twin hanging lockers, and the guest stateroom across from the galley has side-by-side berths. Both heads have circular stall showers. The engine room is a tight fit. Molded flybridge steps, twin cockpit transom doors, teak cockpit sole, teak swim platform, and foredeck sun pad are standard. Cat 385hp 3126 diesels cruise at 26–28 knots (low 30s top).
